Jordan Cove Project secures voluntary easement agreements for 82% of private landowner miles
Agreements highlight significant progress forward for Jordan Cove Project

June 24, 2019 – Coos Bay, OR –The Jordan Cove Project (the “Project”), is pleased to announce that as of today it has signed voluntary easement agreements with 82% of the private landowner miles along the Project’s proposed pipeline route, which will allow the pipeline to cross beneath these properties.

“This 82% is more than just a number. It represents a tremendous measure of progress forward for Jordan Cove,” said Harry Andersen, Senior Vice President for Pembina Pipeline Corporation (“Pembina”), the parent company of Jordan Cove. “This achievement reflects that a vast majority of the most impacted residents in southern Oregon are onboard with the Project and will help to make it a reality.”

When Pembina became owner of Jordan Cove in 2017, the Project had secured voluntary easement agreements with 20% of landowners along the pipeline route. Since then, Pembina has made remarkable strides, securing more than four times that in a single year, a testament to the company’s commitment to working directly with landowners and building long-term relationships in southern Oregon.

“We value the conversations we have had with landowners about the Project and the trust they put in us to be thoughtful stewards of something as important as their family’s land,” said Andersen. “This achievement level means that a strong majority of these families have sat down with our team, had honest conversations and learned that our ultimate goal is to create an investment that nets substantial benefits for their neighbors and their community and their state, while respecting and protecting their land.”

“My property is important to me, I work hard to maintain and improve it,” said Douglas County landowner, Dean Bright. “I trust Pembina to work with me, respect my needs and leave it better after they do their work.”

This achievement confirms that the quiet majority of citizens in southern Oregon support the Jordan Cove Project.

“The Project has seen great progress over the past few months including positive Draft Environmental Impact Statement conclusions from the FERC, which pointed to a majority of environmental impacts being less significant due to the proposed and recommended avoidance, minimization and mitigation measures,” said Andersen. “We are now looking forward to the next phase of this project and building a business that will be a serious game changer for southern Oregon and the state as a whole.”

As the Project continues to make progress through the regulatory and permitting approvals, this 82% level of landowner miles moves Jordan Cove significantly closer to securing 100% of easements through voluntary agreements.
